"Recensione The future is here; this is very much part of it - if you want it. When entering this brave new world of digitizing, it's good to know Ann Marie Shillito has done a vast amount of the research for you and summarized it in a non-intimidating manner that is nevertheless detailed. (Textile Fibre Forum) Descrizione del libro A cutting-edge survey of industrial techniques available for use by designer-makers, packed with case studies and examples of work by contemporary applied artists. Includes a downloadable design to modify and print and guidance on how to brief a bureau service. L'autore Ann Marie Shillito is a jeweller and the CEO of Anarkik3D Ltd, one of a group of specialist companies currently involved in bringing haptics (virtual touch) technology into the mainstream marketplace. Her work is specifically focused on developing software that will make these new technologies accessible and usable for designer-makers around the world. From 1999-2006 she was a Research Fellow at Edinburgh College of Art. She has received numerous awards and grants for various research projects and her jewellery has been widely exhibited."

Artists only rarely depict industrial labor and factories in the fine arts although numerous images did appear in the popular illustrated press of the time one notable exception to this however is Adolph Menzel's Iron Rolling Mill or Modern Cyclops in 1876 which was ex
